Date: 28 January 2026

Resource Person: Sgt R S Goliya (SMC)

An awareness programme on the topic “Prevention of Chickenpox” was conducted in the school assembly on 28 January 2026. The session was delivered by Sgt R S Goliya from the Station Medical Centre (SMC).

During the morning assembly, Sgt R S Goliya addressed the entire student body and staff members. He provided detailed information about chickenpox, explaining that it is a highly contagious viral infection characterized by itchy rashes, fever, and fatigue. He highlighted how the infection spreads easily through direct contact and airborne droplets.

The resource person emphasized the importance of early identification of symptoms, including fever, red spots, and blisters. He also explained preventive measures such as:

- Maintaining proper personal hygiene
- Washing hands regularly
- Avoiding close contact with infected individuals
- Staying home during infection to prevent spread
- Keeping fingernails trimmed to avoid scratching and secondary infections

He stressed the importance of vaccination as the most effective preventive measure against chickenpox. Students were encouraged to inform parents and seek medical advice if symptoms appear.

The session was informative and interactive. Students gained awareness about the importance of hygiene, early detection, and preventive care. The programme successfully enhanced health consciousness among students and promoted a safe and healthy school environment.

The school expresses sincere gratitude to Sgt R S Goliya for taking the time to educate students and contribute to their well-being.
